I do support housing, but I deplore developments that don't include parking. The reality is that people still drive cars and adding 55 cars to the street, (I assume many units will have couples with 2 cars) is too much for Greenwood and would impact the neighbor streets where residents already have trouble parking in front of their own homes...that combined with zoo parking. Also the design is too tall and will affect views/light of home owners. If there is underground parking for all residents and extra for business, go for it...but limit it to 24 units. IF you insist on going through with this, allow only residents who use only public transportation (buses, uber., taxis, bicycle) to become residents. NO car owners.
